

REMARKS

Claims 1-16 and 23-27 which are being pursued in Divisional Application Serial No. 10/897,174 have been cancelled. Claims 17, 18 and 20 have been amended to better define the claimed invention and better distinguish the claimed invention from the prior art. More particularly, claim 17 has been amended to specify that the process steps are practiced in sequence and that the concentrated reduced (rho-) iso- α -acids comprise a preparation of the iso- α -acids in their undissolved free acid form. This clearly distinguishes independent claim 17 from Maye who, as the Examiner notes in the Examiner's Answer mailed December 23, 2004, teaches heating aqueous alkaline solutions, with stirring. A "solution" is "a conversion of a solid or gas into a liquid by mixture with a liquid". (See the Oxford Dictionary of Current English, p. 896 - Exhibit A). As noted in Applicants' specification, Applicants are dealing with a concentrated preparation of iso- α -acids in their undissolved, free acid form, which Applicants heat to fluid state. Stated another way, Applicants' claimed invention requires a melt of the α -acids, while the prior art dissolves the α -acids in a second material.

Further with regard to the foregoing, claim 17 also has been amended to stress a two step sequential process in which the iso- α -acids are first heated to fluid state, and then a concentrated aqueous alkaline metal hydroxide solution is added to the heated preparation of iso- α -acids. This two step sequence permits Applicants to achieve a highly concentrated viscous solution of an alkaline metal salt of the reduced (rho-) iso- α -acids. As noted on pages 8-9 of Applicants' specification, this is unexpected, and reversing the steps would not achieve a concentrated solution due to tendency of aqueous solutions of the alkaline metal salts of (rho-) iso- α -acids to precipitate out of solution at much lower concentrations which would result if the sequence of steps were reverse, and the (rho-) iso- α -acids added to an aqueous alkaline metal hydroxide solution. Thus, Applicants' claimed invention is both novel and unobvious.

An earnest effort has been made to address the several issues raised by the Examiner in the Examiner's Answer, and to advance the prosecution.

Examination of the application in its amended form, and allowance of the application are respectfully requested.

In view of the foregoing amendments and comments it is believed the application now is in order for allowance.
